

Beacon Interfaith Housing Collaborative

Research proves that supportive housing is one of the most effective solutions to end homelessness and reduce housing insecurity. Safe, affordable, supportive housing creates a foundation for building individual and community stability, health, and well-being.

Beacon Interfaith Housing is a nonprofit collaborative of congregations united in action, creating homes and advancing equitable housing. Whether part of a faith community or not, each Beacon housing advocate believes that we all benefit when we all have a safe, affordable place to call home.

Together, they advocate to create new, deeply affordable homes, invest in residents through wrap-around services, and champion transformative policy solutions to ensure all people have a home.

Visit beaconinterfaith.org to learn more about how Beacon lives out its values of collaboration, risk-taking, race equity and inclusive decision-making through its policy work with the Bring It Home, Minnesota campaign for rental assistance.
